Evolved by Edison is Another Triumph of Genius.

PHONOGRAPH AND KINETOSCOPE

To be Utilized in a Novel Way-One May Sit in an American Theatre and Enjoy a Play or Opera Heing Hendered in a London Theatre-Everything as Natural as Life, and the Andience will be Hard to Cunvince that it is Not the Real Thing.

Edison the wizard has said it, and it will be. The day is coming when we will sit in a New York theatre and enjoy a play or an opera at London, Paris or Vienna, says the New York Herald. Edison has predicted stranger things, and they have come to pass.

I am certainly not going to give up till I am auccessful," he says of this, "and every experiment I make brings me appreciably nearer the mark." So we may look forward with some confidence to the realization of this wonderful scientific dream.

Let us project ourselves for a few minutes into the future and see what according to Mr. Edison, we will some according to Mr. Edison, we will some day enjoy.

There is a play, we will say, running in London, that a New York manager thinks would be a splendid attraction her. The players have a long engagement there. The metropolitan public want to se the play while it is new and creating a sensation, so the New York manager reproduces it by the means of Edison's mechanical devices.
The stage of a New York theatre is entirely cleared, even the scenery being removed. A huge white sheet is stretched from the files to the stage, it covers the stage completely, like an immense white curtain. The regular drop curtain rolls down over it.
The Phomographs.

Behind the white curtain are placed

Behind the white curtain are placed a number of phonographs, with imtiplying sound one hundred times. One of these phonographs is for each actor. If there be ten players in the cast, then of these phonographs is for each chem ten phonographs are arranged behind the curtain. Each is loaded with the dislogue of that particular player.

In the gallery, out of sight of the audience, is a huge kinetoscope, containing hundreds of yards of film, upon which is the whole play, actors, costumes, scenery and everything. The theatre is then darkened.

Suddenly there is a flash of electric light and the curtain goes up on the first act. There it is, perfect as life. You don't realize that you are looking at a white curtain. You see what looks like a real stage. It is the picture of a stage of a London theairs. There are the scenery, the heuses, trees and pathways. The chairs look so real that you would almost dare sit down upon them, and even natural colors are produced.

them, and even natural colors are produced.

The orchestra is playing softly and from the wings walks out an actress, not by the jerky fits and starts of the kinetoscope, but with a slow, easy, life, and picks up a bunch of flowers—flowers full of life and color. She turns towards the audience and speaks. Her voice is clear as a bell. You hear every word as distinctly as if you were listening to a living woman.

The hero then comes on the stage. Mou can hear his footsteps as he walks along. He greets his sweetheart. The moment his lips begin to move you hear his voice.

The phonographs and kinetoscopes are timed to the fraction of a second. The characters on the stage are life size and their voices are natural. You are looking at the pictures of the real players; you recognize them at once. You are listening to their own voices, as natural as if it were themselves, instead of their pictures, actually before you.

The play runs on to the end of the first act, when a climax is reached and the curtain goes down in the regular way. The theatre is instantly filuminated again and the next act proceeds. Working the Einstescope.

But up in the gallery the two kinet-But up in the gallery the two kinetoscope operators are working with great rapidity, keeping track of the film that is running through the apparating at lightning apeed. On this film will be 275,000 separate and distinct photographs, each one of which will in turn be thrown upon the white sheet at the rate of forty-eight a second—so fast that they appear to the eye as one moving, realistic scene without break ar blemish.

or blemish.

The phonographs are operated by electricity, being connected on the same circuit that works the kinetoscope, thus making the timing of the player's motions and his voice correspond per-

When Bellamy wrote "Looking Backward" some years ago, he probably nev-er dreamed that his idea of producing leading theatrical performances in the homes of the wealthy would ever be re-with this apparatus on a smaller Tet with this apparatus on a smaller and less elaborate scale, any citizen of New York may sit in his parior and enjoy the whole performance of any play or opera his fancy may select. He can hear the warblings of Meiba and Calve and Patti and the De Reszkes, or if he wants a night of "Faust," or "Carmen" he will simply have the "Faust" or "Carmen" box brought out. In a few minutes the white curiain and the outer drop curtain can be rigged up, and by merely pressing a button he can by merely pressing a button he can have the singers before him and enjoy by merely pressing a button he can have the singers before him and enjoy the opera.

A play running in Paris, London or any part of the world may be reproduced at will, and the talent and grace of the great actors and actresses of today may be seen over again, years after they have passed away.

The only memory left of Edwin Booth, Edmund Kean, Edwin Forrest and all the great players who are dead, is that which tradition carries. The grandeur of their acting and the grace of their gestures are gone forever.

With the kinetoscope-phonograph combination, however, we will be able to preserve more than a memory of the players that are pleasing us to-day.

Now Mr. Edison says that not only is tha plan feasible, but that it was his original idea long before the kinetoscope had been invented, and that the kinetoscope was only one step in carrying out the great scheme. Since then he has had a number of experts constantly experimenting in relation to this plan, and only within the last week or two some experiments had been made which were more encouraging and hopeful than any that had gone before them. made which were more encouraging and hopeful than any that had gone be-fore them.

and hopeful than any that had gone before them.

"There were two things," he added,
"that had to be overcome, and these were the metallic character of the tone of the phonographs, and the change of its timbre to that of the human voice, so that all the beautiful modulations of the singers and actors could be exactly reproduced, and the second was the synchronization of the phonographs with the kinetoscope reproduction. No one that has not tried anything of this kind has any idea of the difficulty of this latter task. It is all very well from a theoretical standpoint, but when we attempt to carry the matter into prac-

a theoretical standpoint, but when we attempt to carry the matter into practice there are all sorts of puzzling and worrying hitches in the programme, with the result that one must have a world of patience to overcome them. "Nevertheless I believe that it will be possible to present grand open on the stage of the Metropolitan open and the perfection of its detail, with nothing more than a big sheet, a lot of phonographs and a big kinetoscope machine."

BATTLE OF VELESTINO.

Graphic Description of the Fight by Stephen Crane, the Novelist.

NEW YORK, May 11.—The Journal publishes a cable dispatch from Stephen Crane, who saw the battle of Valestino, where General Smolenski hurled back Edhem Pasha. Mr. Crane says: Velestino has proved that the Greek oldiers when well led can cope success fully with the Turks even though out-numbered. This battle has proved them good fighters, long fighters and stayers. To be sure the army retreated from Velestino, but it was no fault of the army. The commander bit his fingers and cstino, but it was no fault of the army. The commander bit his fingers and cursed when the order came to retreat. He knew that his army had victory within its grasp. For three days he had been holding the Turka beautifully incheck, killing them as fast as they fell upon him. In the middle of intoxication of victory came the orders to fall back. Why? I only arrived at noon of the second day. The roll of muskerty was tremendous. From a distance it was like tearing a cloth; pearer it sounded like rain on a roof and close up it was lust a long crash after crash. It was a beautiful sound—beautiful as I had never dreamed. It was more impressive than the roar of Niagara and finer than thunder or avalanche—because it had the wonder of human tragedy in it. It was the most beautiful sound of my experience, barring no symphony. The crash of it was ideal.

The slaughter of the Turks was enormous. The fire of the Greeks was so fierce that the Turkish soldiers while charging shielded their eyes with their hands. Eight charges the Turks made on Saturday and they were repulsed each time. The desperate Turkish cavalry even attacked their enemy on a steep, rocky hill. The insane, wicked squadrons were practically annihilated. Seattered fragments slid slowly back, leaving the plain black with wounded and dead men and horses. From a distance it was like a game. There was no blood, no expression, no horrer to be seen. All the assaults of the Turks this day resulted disastrously to them. The Greek troops fought with the stendiness of salareid book-keepers, never tired, never complained. It was a magnificent exhibition. The Greeks fought all the time with the artillery fire on them, even in a musketry lull, but nobody minded anything. The Turks were in great numbers and fought according to the precepts of their religion. But the Greeke were never daunted and whipped them well. Some times it was fighting among saunt hills, sometimes it was fighting among saunt hills, sometimes it was fighting among saunt hills, sometimes it was fighti hills, sometimes fighting on green plains but always the Greeks held their position.

When night came shells burst in frequently, lighting the darkness. By the red flashes I saw the wounded taken to Volo. There was very litle outery among them. They were mostly slent.

THE BERLINER PATENT,

Mr. Spooner Says it is Not Involved in the Decision.

MADISON, Wis., May 11.—Hon. P. L.

Spooner, president of the Standard Tele-phone Company, one of the largest independent telephone companies in the country, was interviewed to-day on the decision of the United States supreme court in the Berliner telephone patent case. Mr. Spooner said: "My informstion is that the decision simply acquits the Bell Company and the patent office of fraud and collusion in the issuance of the Berliner patent. The merits of the patent are not involved. Advices from independent exchanges all over the country show them anxious to try conclusions with the Bell company. Similar patents have expired in foreign countries, and following the decisions of the United States supreme court in other cases the States supreme court in other cases the Berliner patent will finally be declared wold."

WASHINGTON, May 10.—By appointment a large delegation of western senators and representatives and prominent men called upon the President just before 10 o'clock this morning to invite him to attend the semi-centenary celebration of the founding of Sait Lake City, Utsh. Mr. McKinley listened with interest to all that was said and expressed his strong desire to accede to the warm invitation that had been extended to him. At the corner of Sixteenth and Chap-

This has brought him in contact with a host of Wheeling people, so that in repeating what he said to our representative, who recently interviewed him, the reader has not to waste time perusing the opinions of an unknown. What he says is from a citizen, one of ourselves. Read his statement: "The pains in my back, generally of a dull, heavy nature, were located just over the kidneys. When I attempted to do any lifting or stooping, sharp twinges shot through me and I have been so bad that I could scarcely get around. In getting up and down I had to observe the greatest care unless i wished to incur excuciating pangs, I felt pretty well other ways, only I could not trust my back. Both of my sons had been complaining of their backs burding them and when I got a box of Doan's Kidney Fills at the Logan Drug Co, they also took some, and in each of our cases the result was the same; the pain left almost at once. Our backs felt stronger and more robust. We can honestly recommend Doan's Kidney Pills to anyone suffering with their kidneys." ice and coal business. This has brought
